There are two grounds of encouragement for those who engage in this good fight of faith. They have, first, the satisfaction of knowing that they are enlisted on the side of right, and are soldiers in God's army, and that victory at last will crown their labors, their prayers and their tears. The other ground for encouragement is that they are enlisted in a battle which is moral in its character and which has the welfare and interests of humanity in view. The work of the moral soldier is to do good everywhere. It seeks to carry light to the darkened, joy to the sorrowful, trust to the doubting, liberty to the captive, hope to the dying. Know that you are possessed of the nature divine and that each and all ought to live as children of God. Be strong in the faith and follow after righteousens, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Tight the good fight of faith, law hold on eternal life."

It is in accord with every dictate of justice that there be a memorial day for those who are gone, and it is well that people now recognize anew their obligation to the veterans. Our aim is to pay homage to every soldier in free-dom's cause and lift into prominence the importance of his self-sacrifice. Back of the present time are 6,000, years and the ways are gory and paved with fallen heroes, but none has been more worthy of honor than our soldiers. Coast Artillery Companies.

In observance of Memorial Sunday, the two companies of coast artillery, the Fifth and the Third, on invitation from the rector, Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, attended the evening service at Christ church on Sunday. Commanded by Capt. W. G. Tarbox and Capt. E. N. Coleman, Jr., respectively, the two companies, about sixty strong, marched into the church, preceded by the vested choir, singing Onward, Christian Soldiers, as the processional. The companies had special seats reserved for them in the front of the main isle, and a large congregation occupied the body of the church for the interesting service. The music for evening was augmented by John P. Swahn and Frank E. King, cornetists, James T. Woods and William B. Young, Jr., trombonists.

The service of evening prayer was conducted by the rector and before his address he spoke a brief but cordial welcome to the soldiers, whom he said he would be glad to greet more often than once a year as a company in his church.

Like the more notable heroes they too were striving to reach the goal and although they fell they kept up the fight until the end. In a similar way the state has its special days for the national heroes, and we set apart once a year a roes, and we set apart once a year a day for the men who have gone from us, those to whom our country owes its prosperity and perpetuity, and on this day we remember those resting quietly in sleep for the great reveille.

H. Osgood Lodge Decorates Graves of Deceased Members-Memorial Day Guests in Local Homes-Notes.

Hugh H. Osgood lodge, I. O. O. F., Manchester Unity, this year appointed James McNeely as a committee to decorate the graves of deceased members for Memorial day. Accordingly Brother McNeely has appropriately looked after the graves of Hugh H. Osgood in Yantic cemetery and of John W. Baker in Hamilton avenue cemetery. Since its institution the lodge has had only four deaths in its membership, the other two members being buried in New Bedford and England, respectively.

At its stated meeting Friday night the lodge did little but routine business, and after a season of much activity the coming summer promises to be quiet. Brother Robert McNeely will go to Boston on Saturday as a delegate from Connecticut to the national convention. This convention is to consider the subsidiary annual movable committee, the formation of which is likely to come to pass.

Grand Master James Moss has completed his list of official visitations to the lodges throughout the state, beginning them on July 6 and ending Dec. 3d.
